Blinko has written and illustrated three books. The first, The Primal Screamer , was a fictionalized semi-autobiographical novel with horror elements. It was published in by Spare Change Books and received a second printing in The book is written as a series of journal entries made by the therapist of "Nathaniel Snoxell" who starts a band which is never named but is similar to Rudimentary Peni in many ways. Blinko's second book, Haunted Head , was published in by David Tibet via Coptic Cat , in a limited edition of approximately copies. An exclusive micro-edition of 60 copies was also published, featuring an original piece of art, while all copies of the book contained a postcard with a handwritten excerpt from the book.

The edition size reflected the number of Blinko's handwritten postcards, from which the text of the book was transcribed, and which were included in the book. His third book was titled Visions of Pope Adrian 37th. It was published in , again by Coptic Cat, in two extremely limited editions which both included a small piece of original art by Blinko, drawn directly onto a page of the book. The "standard edition" was limited to copies, while the "special edition" was limited to The book included 87 drawings, an introduction by outsider art specialist Colin Rhodes and a brief introduction by Blinko. The artwork in this book was reproduced in its original A5 size.

Blinko also contributed to a collection of punk fiction short stories, Gobbing, Pogoing and Gratuitous Bad Language! His story, "Punk Alice" a reference to Rudimentary Peni's song "Alice Crucifies the Paedophiles" , is written in a sketchbook style of doodles and scribbled phrases referencing the death of punk , chess , Catholicism, depression, goth , Rudimentary Peni lyrics and drug chemicals.
